My mother was born into modest circumstances in a small village. From an early age, she demonstrated a fierce determination to educate herself despite numerous obstacles that stood in her way - societal norms discouraging female education being one amongst them. She not only succeeded in becoming the first woman graduate in our family but also paved the way for countless others by setting up schools in rural areas where educational opportunities were scarce. Her life journey serves as both inspiration and guidance for me on how to navigate through hardships with grace while staying focused on one's goals.
